LIKE REDHOT NEEDLES.

That is How the Galvanic Battery Punishment at the City Home Felt.

It appears that electricity is not confined to electrocution as a means of punishment as it has been found to be effective in case of minor criminals at the Newark City Home.

This institution is a temporary retreat for the incorrigible youth of Newark, for many of whom, by reason of loug practive, the rod and switch have lost their terrors. Dr. Whitehorn of Verona is the regular physician of the place, and is credited with the adoption of a medical battery for administering reproof.

A boy named Rafferty tried to stab one mined to try the electrical punishment on him. He was taken into the Superintendent's private room, which was darkened to benefit the solemity of the occasion, and Rafferty was requested to remove his coat and roll up his sleeves. The doctor was in attendance and adjusted his battery, which gave forth an ominous buzzing sound.

The proceedings so far were unusual and the boy commenced to get frightened. One electrode was placed at the back of his neck, and the other, in the form of a brush with wire bristles, was rubbed over the boy's arm. With a yell of terror the boy broke away from the chair and stood shivering in an agony of apprehension. He was forced back. however, and the Superintendent continued dusting the wire electrode over the boy's arms and face. The current was increased and the boy after being nearly paralyzed with fear, was finally released in an exceedingly limp condition and in a very penitent frame of mind. For several days he remained in a spiritless condition, and after he recovered. The W. T. B. Social Club of Montclair not understanding the nature of the gave a masquerade and dance at the punishment, he spread the report that he had been pricked with bunches of redhot needles and subjected to the > most awful tortures. The method proves itself effective, however, as in no case where it has been tried has the offender given cause to require a second application. The authorities of the institution consider it an entire success in subduing the vicious tendencies of their youthful charges .-Electricity.
